

THE FAMILY DOCTOR.

A GILL of strong tea, taken at bed-time, will relieve night sweat.
For rheumatism: A large piece of flannel wet sprinkled with saltpetre.
For hacking cough, sore throat or mouth, take a teaspoonful of salt in a half-cup of water, and gargle three times a day before each meal.
In these days of neuralgia and sudden colds, says an exchange, it is sensible to have some means of relief close at hand. Make two or three little bags of cotton cloth and fill them with hops. Then when you need them heat just as hot as possible even to the extent of browning the cloth, and apply to the aching member. People who cannot endure the odor of the old-time remedy of hops and vinegar do not object to the hops alone. The dry hop-bag is a great improvement upon wet cloths of any kind.

ALCOHOL AS STIMULANT.—Dr. John Wilson, in his "Health and Health Resorts," remarks of alcoholic drinks as stimulants: "They are, as a rule, the most palatable; they impart gentle stimulation, arouse the aesthetic nature as no other carbonaceous matter does. I confess they are open to the objection of endangering the formation of habits of intemperance, but in advanced cases of phthisis I have rarely known this to be the case, and I am convinced that I have seen at least many days added to the lives of such invalids by the use of these beverages without this evil consequence. By a wise law of nature, that which subserves a needful purpose rarely demoralizes if indulged in under the stress of necessity, and in cases of rapid disintegration it would seem that the toxic effect of the alcohol is more or less lost in the process of combustion, in which its carbonaceous principle plays so important a part."

SICK HEADACHE.—This complaint is the result of eating too much and exercising too little. The first symptom of the disease is in the fact that the stomach was not able to digest the food last introduced into it, either from having been unsuitable or excessive in quantity. A diet of bread and butter, with ripe fruit or berries, with moderate and continuous exercise in the open air sufficient to keep up a gentle perspiration, would cure almost every case of sick headache in a short time. Two teaspoonfuls of powdered charcoal in a half glass of water, and drank, often gives instant relief. Sick headache with some persons comes on at regular intervals, and is the signal of distress which the stomach puts out to inform us that there is an over-alkaline condition of the fluids; that it needs a natural acid to restore the battery to its former normal working condition. When the first symptom of headache appears take a table-spoonful of lemon juice clear, fifteen minutes before each meal, and the same dose at bedtime. Follow this up until all symptoms are passed, taking no other remedies, and you soon will be able to go free from this unwelcome nuisance. Many people will object to this because the remedy is too simple, but many cures have been effected in this way.

TO CURE SNEEZING.—A correspondent of the British Medical Journal says: "During the recent rapid changes of temperature, I caught a cold in my head, accompanied by almost incessant sneezing. My unfortunate nose gave me no rest. The slightest impact of cold air, or passing from the outside air into a warm room, equally brought on a fit of sneezing. In vain I snuffed camphor and pulsatilla; the light catarrh still triumphed over me. At length I resolved to see what the maintenance of a uniform temperature would do toward diminishing the irritability of my Schneiderian membrane, and accordingly I plugged my nose with cotton wool. The effect was instantaneous; I sneezed no more. Again and again I tested the efficacy of this simple remedy, always with the same result. However near I was to a sneeze, the introduction of the pledgets stopped it at once. Nor was there any inconvenience from their presence, making them sufficiently firm not to tickle, and yet leaving them sufficiently loose to easily breathe through." This is really worth knowing, for incessant sneezing is among the greatest of smaller ills, and it seems only a rational conclusion to hope that this simple plan may furnish the most efficient remedy against one of the most distressing symptoms of hay fever.

AN ILLINOIS MAN was arrested and fined $25 for disturbing a debating club. We should like to know him. The man who has got the voice and energy to disturb a debating club, provided the latter is healthy and active in its diabolical mission, is worthy our acquaintance, and ought to be a fog-horn on a stern and rock-bound coast.—Lowell Citizen.

ANCIENT ANATOMY.—The ancient anatomist must have had a zeal for the science which makes the imagination shudder. It reached to nothing less than dissecting men alive; for this purpose the bodies of criminals were devoted. Herophilus, a Greek physician of Chalcedon, who flourished 570 years before the Christian era, is said to have been one of the first who dissected human bodies. Tertullian says he dissected them alive; but Celsus, who published a dissertation in 1786, denies that he was guilty of this barbarity. Herophilus, by an unprecedented spirit of investigation, discovered, as some report, the location of the nerves, with their various uses, the pulse, etc., and gave to the different parts of the human frame the names which they still bear.

The dissection of dead bodies was, at no very late period, looked upon as sacrilegious; and the Emperor Charles V. ordered a consultation of the theologians of Salamanca to determine whether, in point of conscience, a body might be dissected in order to obtain a knowledge of its structure.

In the month of January, 1474, the physicians and surgeons of Paris represented to Louis XI. that several persons of condition were afflicted with the stone, colic, pains and stitches in the side; that it would be proper to inspect the parts where these disorders were engendered; that the greatest light they could receive would be from performing an operation on a living man, and therefore they begged that a francarcher, condemned to be hanged for a robbery, who was afflicted with these complaints, should be delivered up to them. Their petition was granted, and the operation, the first in lithotomy ever made, was publicly performed in St. Severin's churchyard. After the operators had examined and made their experiment, the bowels were replaced in the body, which was sewed up, and so well dressed that in a fortnight's time the man was cured and pardoned of his crimes.

Keeping to the Right.

Persons going about in public places should remember to "keep to the right." This is almost everywhere the rule, especially for persons riding or driving. In England, it is said, drivers pass each other on the left. They prefer this, because it enables each one to see how near his wheels are going to the other carriage. But throughout this country the custom and law for vehicles are to drive on the right side. When one is driving along a country road, with no carriage approaching in front, he can choose the best part of the road; but, as soon as another comes to meet him, he ought to drive well over on the right-hand side. If the other vehicle does the same the two will pass in safety. Yet one cannot always trust that the other will do this. Suppose it is a flock of sheep or a drove of cows which are hauling along the road by means of oxen, as is sometimes done in this country. Such things cannot be expected to keep to the right. Whoever meets them must do the best he can to avoid accident. He must not drive to the right obstinately, but must use common sense. For a drove of animals a good way is to stop one's wagon entirely and let them go past in their own way. Sometimes one meets an ignorant or rude person who will not turn out to his right. It is not the law that one may drive into his carriage and break it, or say, "I drove to the right and he ought to have done so." One must drive as wisely as he can to avoid doing mischief. But if a person, driving carefully, runs into another, who did not keep to the right, all the blame will be on the other driver, and he will have to pay damages. Therefore, it is particularly important to keep well to the right when turning sharp corners.

For foot passengers on sidewalks the rule is not so positive. In many country places the sidewalks are not very distinct, or it is considered good manners to allow a lady or old person to walk by the wall. In all large towns, where there are established sidewalks, the rule is to walk on the right-hand side, and a lady who enters along on the left-hand side of the walk shows that she does not understand the custom, and seldom gets along as fast.

In cities foot passengers should keep on the sidewalk except when they cross the street at a crossing; they have no business to be on the street between crossings, and if they go there it is at their own risk. Horses and carriages have no right to intrude on the sidewalk. A boy in Troy was walking along the sidewalk near a livery stable when a horse came walking out of the stable with no one to lead him. His owner, inside, had allowed him to come out alone, believing he would go straight to the drinking trough. Instead, he strayed along the sidewalk. He was a horse which had a bad habit of kicking, and, coming out where the boy was, he kicked him, though the boy did nothing to provoke it. The boy was so badly hurt that a lawsuit was brought, and the court said that the owner of the horse must pay damages; his horse had no business to be upon the sidewalk. Any one who lets an ugly horse go loose upon the sidewalk must pay for the mischief it does to persons who do not molest it. It is no answer to say that the owner supposed the horse was trained not to go upon the walk.—A Lawyer, in the Christian Union.

Uncle Mose Turns Over a New Leaf.

A neighbor, with a coffee-cup in her hand, called in on Uncle Mose, remarking: "Uncle Mose, I want to borrow a cup of parched coffee from you for breakfast till to-morrow."

"Go right to de box on de shelf and hep yerself."

The neighbor did as requested, but discovered the box to be as empty as the head of a Legislator.

"Uncle Mose, dar's no parched coffee in dis heah box."

"Does yer know whar dar ain't no coffee in dat ar box?"

"No, doesn't know nuffin' about it."

"Dar ain't no coffee in dat ar box," said the old man, solemnly, "bekase dat ar am de returned coffee-box. Ef yer had bring back all de coffee yer borrowed last year hit would be plum full."

"Please."

"Human nature," says a writer for young women, "resents the imperative mood." Do think of this, girls. If you ask a child to wait on you, say "Please."

Be polite to servants and inferiors. Be courteous even to the cat. Why push her roughly aside, or invite her claws? If kind good-nature and gentleness ruled in every home, what sunlight would home enjoy! A great deal depends upon the girls—the sisters, the daughters.

No person can stoop so low as those who are over anxious to rise.

Deaf and Dumb Barbers. A man dressed in a thin summer woolen suit and a dilapidated straw hat entered our sanctum.

"Sir," he said, "you see before you a reminder of the summer's sun, so to speak. I am not from the tropics, neither am I dressed for enjoying all the comforts of a trip in search of the North pole. Excuse me, no North pole for me," and his teeth chattered, while a quiver of icy chilliness seemed to run across his whole frame.

"Are you cold?" we asked. "If so, walk up by the stove and get warm."

"No, sir, no! warm as the sportive African who swings his juvenile upon the equatorial line. I am needy, busted, broke, sir. You see before you a speculator whose cart is keeled over and broken, with the horses on a run so far ahead a greased track of lightning can't overtake 'em. Four months since I started a barber shop. Now, thinks I, I'll strike a new beat. So I just goes and hires four deaf and dumb tonsorial artists and then put up notices that customers coming to my shop would have a quiet shave by deaf and dumb barbers and no questions asked. The thing took on the start, but, when the confounded barbers pulled their shaves and began writing out the usual questions, blow me if I didn't discover that I was a ruined man. Yes, sir, barbers are barbers; and, when I closed my shop, busted up and started on a tramp, I just says to myself it's no use. If dead men could be learned to handle the razor over a man's face, the blasted things would have spiritual mediums asking their questions the same old line of questions—Ah, thank yer, sir; ta-ta. With this time I'll send a counter-irritant down my throat that'll knock the thinness out of this summer suit and give my stomach a cleaner shave than any barber can."

And, as the shattered vase retired, the perfume of the roses remained in the sanctum until an open window restored the natural tone of the atmosphere.—Whitcomb Times.

In the London Zoological Garden is an otter that can write. It probably spends its time writing otter-graphs.

Not a Captious Man.

A Detroit policeman was accosted by a colored man with the remark: "I don't want to seem capshus, sah."

"—deed I don't," but dar's trouble in my house ober dar."

"What sort of trouble?"

"Why, sah, a cull'd pesson called Williams sits down wid his foot on de stove covarsin' wid my wife. I so ordered him to vacate, sah, but he refused. What am de proper course in sich a case?"

"Go and order him out once more."

In about ten minutes the man returned and reported:

"I don't want to seem capshus, sah, but I dun ordered him out, just as you said."

"And he didn't go?"

"No, sah. He said he'd see me in Texas fust. What would be your advice under sich circumstances?"

"If a man was in my house and wouldn't go out, I'd put him out."

"Would it seem capshus, sah?"

"I don't think so."

"Just as you say, sah—just so, sah. I feel sartin dat I kitch de blash."

He retired into his house, and the officer remained to see the end. It came in about two minutes. Three or four yells were heard, somebody's feet were seen to strike the wall, and then the door opened and Williams flew into the street like a half-filled straw bed. He was scarcely on his feet before he bolted up the walk, and the owner of the house can do the steps to explain:

"I don't like to seem capshus, sah, but now dat I've got my hand in I'd like your advice about ouffin' de ole woman up to a peak! 'Pears to me dat she's rter encouraged Williams to believe dat I couldn't hick one side of him!"
